

TEXTILES
IN GOOD COMPANY

AN ENSEMBLE OF DESIGNERS TRANSLATES THE LATEST
FABRIC COLLECTIONS INTO CHIC ENTERTAINING SPACES.
DISCOVER THE ART OF THE MIX.

WRITTEN BY CARA GERS

PHOTO: JESSICA WILSON FOR INTERIORS

GEREMIA DESIGN BOYS CLUB

"It's material that makes an object or space tactile," muses Lauren Geremia, principal designer of San Francisco's Geremia Design. And, when presented with a vast array of the season's fabric offerings, Geremia opted for a serene palette of neutrals to create the refined, masculine space shown here that invites intimate gatherings and quiet conversation. "I wanted the dining space to be minimal but mature," she explains, "selecting simplistic patterns and muted colors that allow an opportunity for layering and creating dynamic, textured compositions." Rose Tarlow Melrose House "napkins" sit atop place mats fashioned from a Knoll Luxe material to ground the tablescape, while a Cowtan & Tout fabric dresses the vintage mid-century chair frames and Flere Frey's stunning abstract textile takes its place as artwork—all giving way to a neutrally color-coded dining room where masculine notes abound and simplicity speaks volumes.